

Dear Sir:

I would hate to lose access to my favorite radio station, KLOVE. This station would be hard to replace with a LPFM station, since I would have no guarantee that the new station would offer Christian rock music as KLOVE does. In a small town in Wyoming, it would be difficult to offer one local LPFM station which could offer programming to satisfy many diverse people, and having more than one LPFM provider here would be unlikely. I feel it is much more advantageous to have access to a national feed for programming such as this than to try to provide programming at the local level.
